Who We Are

At The Conservation Fund, we make conservation work for America. We are a nonprofit environmental organization that balances human demand with nature's capacity. By creating solutions that make environmental and economic sense, we are redefining conservation to demonstrate its essential role in our future prosperity. We are consistently top-ranked for efficiency and effectiveness.

What We Do

We protect land, water and wildlife. Since our founding in 1985 we have protected over 8 million acres across America by working to restore nature, provide refuge for wildlife and create economic and recreation opportunities for people.

We generate jobs that advance conservation.

By financing entrepreneurs whose products and practices use natural resources responsibly, and by supporting ranchers and forest landowners who manage working lands sustainably, we are able to support a healthy environment that generates economic returns.

We make communities more vibrant. Our work generates economic, environmental and social benefits with conservation as the foundation for engaging others. We help communities plan for growth by balancing nature and commerce, and we design plans to help major American cities enhance public health and livability.

We create new models that redefine conservation.

Through our sustainable forestry and land-based fish farming programs, we develop innovative solutions to combat tough environmental challenges—using conservation to deliver sound economic benefits.

“We were founded in 1985 on a simple but enduring principle: that environmental protection and economic vitality are inseparable. In fact, they are mutually reinforcing—and every aspect of our work reflects this balance.”

What You Can Do

Help us keep conservation working for America.

Natural, historic and working lands that need protection are disappearing rapidly, and our use of natural resources today is not sustainable. We must act now to conserve the natural resources vital to our future prosperity. Your support ensures that together we can keep conservation working for America. When you give or partner with us, you're supporting conservation that's good for people, our economy, and America's land and natural resources.
